The Austrian Army 1740-80 (2): Infantry (Men-at-Arms)

Synopsis

At the accession of Maria Theresa in 1740, the Austro-Hungarian army included 52 infantry regiments, of which three were Hungarian, three Netherlandish and one Italian. The remainder drew their recruits not only from the Habsburg territories, including Bohemia, Moravia and Silesia (the last being lost to Prussia in 1742), but from the autonomous states of the Holy Roman Empire and beyond. The proportion of Hungarian raised regiments was set to rise in the coming years though - indeed 'foreign' personnel comprised an important part of the military establishment. This title, the second in a sequence of three, details the organisation, uniform and equipment of the cosmopolitan Austrian Army from 1740-80, focusing on infantry troops.

Customer Reviews

In this book you will find many pictures of the infantry's uniforms. This helped me because I am in a Seven Years' War Minatures Club. If you need any book like this stay at this site and you will find many more books of interest on this subject.

The men at Arms series fills a gap in books on this subject. I can use them when I paint miniatures and if I should get paint on them then I can pick up a new one.

Part 2 of an excellent series on the Austrian army in the SYW
